

Another of life's ironies

On 15/06, Leslie-John Newman writes in The Age's letters section: "Only an investigation into [the Gaza beach shelling] by a truly independent authority such as the United Nations will determine Israel's guilt or not." The following day The Age reports: "A review of the United Nations staff management has found a culture that undervalues merit, and is riddled with nepotism and bias."

Just another example of life's little ironies.
